A CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF SIR HARRY PLATT'S CONTRIBUTIONS TO SURGICAL LITERATURE

(1915): A Case of Lumbar Spinal Abscess Communicating with the Lung. Medical Chronicle, 61, 85.
Lancet, i, 461–463.
(1919): The Eradication of Latent Sepsis Preparatory to Bone Transplantation in Non-union of Gun-shot
PLATT, H., and BRENTNALL, E. S. (1919): Faradic Stimulation of Nerve and Muscle During Operations. Lancet, i, 884.
(1920): On the Results of Bridging Gaps in Injured Nerve Trunks by Autogenous Fascial Tubulization and (1921): A Hunterian Lecture on the General Indications for Operative Exploration in Nerve Injuries. Lancet, i, 789–795.
(1922): Pseudo-Coxalgia: (Osteochondritis Deformans Juvenilis Coxa: Quiet Hip Disease.) A Clinical and PLATT, H., and ROWEY BRISTOW (1923): Les résultats éloignés des opérations pour blessures des nerfs London: Cassell and Company.
PLATT, H., and BRISTOW, W. Rowley (1924): The Remote Results of Operations for Injuries of the Peripheral (1928): Special Discussion on the Treatment of Acute Osteomyelitis. Proceedings of the Royal Society of Medicine (Section of Orthopaedics), 21, 55-64.
(1935): Injuries of the Semilunar Cartilages of the Knee. Manchester University Medical School Gazette, 14, 77-79.
(1939): The Organisation of Orthopaedic Services in a Large City. The Medical Officer, 61, 15-16.
(1943): The Ideal Hospital of the Future. Manchester University Medical School Gazette, 22, 3-8.

